ELECTROCUTION.

Murderer Joseph L. Tice, the Ninth Victim.

He Meets His Death Bravely and Without Bravado.

Sixty-Three Seconds He Was in the Chair—The Electroaction Pronounced the Nearest Perfection of Any Yet Tried—“Oh, That Whisky.”

AUBURN, N. Y., May 19.—Joseph L. Tice, the Rochester wife murderer, was executed at 6:30 Wednesday morning. The execution was a great success from the start. Short contacts were made, this being deemed better than too long ones. There was nothing revolting about the scene.

The witnesses saw no burning of flesh, no exhalation of air from the lungs, no struggle of the victim. The murderer met his fate calmly. The electric current was turned into the body four times, each contact being brief. The physician in charge believed that better results would be obtained in this way than with two long contacts. The complete time of contact was fifty seconds. Tice slept from 10 to 12 o'clock last night. At midnight he was awakened to be shaved. He had been told early in the evening by his spiritual advisers that his life would be taken Wednesday morning. He said he was ready and would meet death like a soldier, and he joined fervently in the prayers of the clergyman.

All the physicians examined the body and all agreed that Tice had passed into eternity the instant the first contact was made. Electrician Davis said that the indicator showed 1,720 volts on the first contact with a very slight falling off when the three other circuits were made. A closer examination of the body showed no marks or burns upon it. Dr. Ruff declared that the electrocution was perfection itself.

Chaplain Yates and Pastor Penney were with Tice half an hour before the execution took place. He told them, they say, that he did not sleep well last night and that his spine had pained him considerably.

“He was very brave,” said Chaplain Yates. “He fulfilled his promise to Mr. Penney and myself that he would die like a man and a Christian. His last words to me were, ‘Oh, if I didn’t drink that whisky.’ Put that in big type,” added Mr. Penney with tears in his eyes. Then he said: “But for that very thing he was as good a man as any witness in this room.”

Dr. George E. Fell, of Buffalo, who also witnessed the Kemmler execution, said: “The execution of Tice can not be improved upon. The frequent short contacts are undoubtedly the best method. There was nothing revolting in this case. As compared with the Kemmler case this was the more satisfactory. In the execution of Tice there were absolutely no reflex movements from beginning to end, aside from the rigidity of the body produced by the breaking of the current. I was one of the first to advocate electrical execution, and after seeing this execution, I am satisfied that the grounds I assumed were correct. There is no method comparable to it, which this case demonstrates.”

Hope for Mrs. Maybrick.

LONDON, May 19.—Counsel Alexander McDougall, after consulting with counsel employed to consider the case of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman who is serving a life sentence in Woking prison for the alleged poisoning of her husband, has given an opinion in the case, disagreeing with the opinion recently given by Sir Charles Russell and Messrs. Moulton, Poland and Smith, to the effect that the rules of original procedure debar Mrs. Maybrick from any remedy at law unless an error making her trial a nullity can be shown to exist in the record.

A Tough Man Killed.

SPRING CITY, Tenn., May 19.—In Eter’s saloon, at Rockwood, Robert Haggard, a tough of King’s creek, Boone county, was drinking and making threats. She can not recover as it is believed she inhaled the flames.

France Is Alarmed.

PARIS, May 19.—It is reported here that the czar has consented to the marriage of the Czarvitch and Princess Margaret of Hohenzollern, youngest sister of William II. ANGORA GOAT INDUSTRY.

It is expected that a fine start here and will be developed.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Mr. Bailey, of San Jose, Cal., who has been visiting Washington in the hope of stirring our government up to some activity in promoting the Angora goat industry, is on his way home, pretty well pleased on the whole, with the result of his efforts. By Secretary Rusk’s advice, the breeders whom Mr. Bailey represents will give up their attempt to press the bill introduced by Mr. Hermann of Oregon calling for an appropriation of $35,000 to set the government up in the goat raising business.

In consideration of this Mr. Rusk will probably work through Secretary Blaine and try to induce Turkey to permit our breeders to buy two or three hundred choice animals with their own money. Besides being a more constitutional way of getting at the same thing, this plan has been proved by experience to be practicable, for Mr. Bailey himself now possesses 10,000 Angora goats, 1,000 of them full-blooded, and all sprung from an original importation of four. There have been no importations from Turkey during the last ten years and the need of fresh blood is beginning to be seriously felt.

It appears, from the statistics gathered in view of the effort to set up a government goat farm, that the Angora goat industry now exists in thirty states and all the territories. Six hundred thousand pounds of hair a year are raised here, supplying fine plushes for the Pullman Car Co. and other large consumers; yet the industry is still in its infancy, and we import ten pounds of Mohair for every pound we produce.

THE CAST OFF.

Henry Astor Doesn’t Worry About His Brother’s Will.

He Declares He Has No Intention of Contesting It.

Happily Married to the Girl of His Choice.

Mr. Astor Lives Contentedly on His Farm, Likewise His Wife’s Sisters, Cousins and Aunts.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Henry Astor, the younger brother of the late William Astor, who was shut out from the will, says he will make no contest. Henry Astor takes no more interest in the births, deaths, marriages or even wills of the Astor family than he does in Choctaw. He was cut off, he will be remembered, because he married the daughter of one of the Astor farm hands at Red Hook named Malvina Dinehart. In fact, the whole family cut him at the time of his marriage. When his father, William B. Astor, died he was left with an annuity—a mere pittance compared to the vast bulk of the property—but it was enough to yield Henry Astor, country gentleman, a handsome income. His grandfather, the first John Jacob, had left him a pretty little memento in the shape of some valuable land and houses in New York, so that when he asserted his independence he was not thrown by any means upon the world. Cut off as he was by his father and brothers, Mr. Astor is still a rich man.

His selection of Malvina Dinehart for his bride was not unlike that of King Cophetua and the beggar girl. He not only enriched her alone, but he enriched all her family, and their name was legion. Settling down in the Copake flats, the home of the Dineharts, he has lived there quietly, almost a recluse, ever since. Years and years of keen devotion to his farm has made the Copake flats to blossom like the rose. He has built himself a big house, which stands in the midst of 105 acres, all in the highest state of cultivation. But that immediate property does not represent his entire farm lands by any means. He practically owns the whole district.

Mr. Astor is certainly a remarkable instance of a brother-in-law. When he married Malvina Dinehart he married the whole family. One by one the numerous brothers and sisters have all grown rich through the fertilizing pocket-book of Henry Astor. William Dinehart, the eldest brother, owns one farm in the neighborhood of 280 acres and two others besides. Delbert Dinehart, Franklin Dinehart, John, Alfred and all the various other Dineharts, have been provided for in the same generous fashion. All these farms are likewise splendidly stocked and cultivated, and in the midst of them for twenty-five years Henry Astor and the country girl of his choice have been living like a local lord and lady bountiful.

The Coughing Check Raised Again.

DETROIT, Mich., May 19.—The sum of $3,300 was secured from the Third national and City Savings banks of this city by means of raised drafts. The modus operandi of the forger and his personal description tallied almost exactly with that of the celebrated Thomas Hunt, the man with the hacking cough, who, it is believed, carried off at least $10,000 from Cincinnati banking institutions.

Torn by a Cyclone.

CINCINNATI, May 19.—The whirling wind storm dropped from the sky at a point about a mile above Miamtown, on the Harrison pike, Wednesday afternoon. In less than ten minutes there was a track of desolation left behind it. Homes, barns, sheds, trees and other objects were either blown down or torn from the earth and made kindling wood.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 19.—The democratic convention chose as delegates at large H. H. Richardson, Dupont Guerry, Fleming Dullington and James M. Smith. MIXED

Are the Cashier’s Accounts—The Admirals at the Mobile Post Office Badly Tangled.

MOBILE, Ala., May 19.—Assistant Postmaster Geo. S. Moore, who is also cashier of the post office, is missing. He left home Tuesday forenoon, leaving his watch and a few valuables, and where he has gone no one knows. During the afternoon Postmaster Barker telegraphed for a post office inspector and to-day Inspector Hancock and another expert are busy with the post office accounts. The postmaster says that it can not be said that there is any default on Moore’s part and nothing will be given out at present.

The accounts are in some confusion, and he had urged Moore to straighten them out. He believes that if any money has been taken it is a small amount. This belief is sustained by the presence in the safe of $1,300 which Moore could have taken had he desired. Moore was an exemplary young man for many years, but his appointment as assistant postmaster and his rise in political affairs seem to have been a curse to him, as he has become recalcitrant.

He formed bad associations and considerable complaint has been made because of his neglect of duty. Some time ago a merchant ordered some stamped envelopes at the post office and asked the return address printed thereon.

Moore, it seems, had the printing done at a local firm, instead of at Washington, and the postmaster’s attention was called to the matter. Moore was reprimanded, but not discharged. He took a position with the office seven years ago. When Mr. Barker, the present postmaster, was appointed Moore was an opposing candidate, and in time was appointed assistant by Mr. Barker.

“MAMMA IS SICK,”

And Won’t Speak to Us,” Said Two Little Tots—But Their Mamma Had Been Dead For Several Hours.

SINKEY, O., May 19.—Two children, aged three and five years, who, by reason of their youth, did not realize the nature of their discovery, found their mother dead about 5 o’clock Wednesday evening. She was Mrs. Frank Miller, aged twenty-six, the wife of a farmer in Salem township. Her husband left home at 6 a. m., to be gone until night time. The children played until they became hungry, and in hunting for their mother found her on her bed. They could not arouse her, and after many attempts they went to the neighbors and said: “Mamma is sick, and won’t speak to us.” The neighbors went to the house and found the woman cold, she evidently having been dead about eight hours. The supposed cause of her death is heart disease.

A MOVING CONE

That Sucked Up Water From the Streams to Its Path.

CONEY, Ia., May 19.—A cone-shaped cloud passed over this town, half a mile east. When first noticed it was about two miles south, in Cedar river bottom, sucking up the water of the creek with a terrible roaring sound. It passed up the bottom, over the bluff, tearing down out-buildings and unroofing barns and houses, among them being those of Risden Tipton and L. M. Cecil. Charley Gay, a young man, was picked up and carried twenty yards and seriously hurt. No fatalities are yet reported. This is the first storm of the kind ever known here.
